

15 notable Bostonians share what they're gifting this holiday season

Business leaders, media personalities, an actress, and others talk about what's on their gift-giving lists.

A couple kisses moments after the Christmas tree lit up at Faneuil Hall in 2018.

–Matthew J. Lee / The Boston Globe

SHARE

TWEET

COMMENTS

By

Kristi Palma, Boston.com Staff, Megan O'Brien, Kevin Slane, Staff Writer, Erin Kushner, Boston.com Staff, Hayden Bird, Boston.com Staff

updated on November 29, 2019

Looking for some gift-giving inspiration? We reached out to some of Boston's most notable people to see what they're giving their friends and family this year.

RELATED LINKS

Here are Boston.com's picks for local gifts this holiday season

Eliza Dushku, actress: "For the guys, husband, brothers, and dads: I have never met a man who didn't fall in love with the Ugg slippers/slides. They wear them until holes form in them then I get them a new pair for the next Christmas after that. For women, I love knowing my [friends and family] are switching over to natural facial products for their beautiful bodies and skin.

Boston's Follain natural stores carry the goods: Tata Harper cheek tint, May Lindstrom Blue Cocoon balm for winters, RMS all-natural concealer, hair care, etc."

Dan Fitzgerald, co-founder of Heartbreak Hill Running

Company: "My favorite thing to give is custom sneakers with personalized messages, whether it's for an athlete I coach or my wife celebrating a big milestone. I love custom sneakers as something special. You can personalize the colors to the person, and there are certainly message constraints — you can't write a whole lot — but I think it's really thoughtful. Depending on your scale, it's somewhat expensive or somewhat affordable, but for as low as 120 bucks, 150 bucks, you can get a really cool, customized pair of shoes for somebody that they can wear for a while."

Lisa Gozashti, owner and manager of Brookline

Booksmith: "What I like to do is focus on home and hearth, and celebrating loved ones, family, and coming together. Especially around the holidays, we're getting into this time of darkness, so I like to do a festive basket, something that shows the deep culture, traditions, and vibrant colors from around the world. I like to include items like cutting boards, fair trade-sourced spice mixes that have lots of color, tea, spoon rests, beautiful handmade mugs, or an assortment of different colored handmade glasses.”

Betsi Graves, founder and director of Urbanity Dance: “I try to give local as much as possible, especially in our big-box online culture. There are so many great spots right around the South End in particular, where I live. A couple of my favorite spots would be Tadpole for the kiddos in your life, and Olives & Grace for really well-curated, unique gifts that I think really are quite out of the ordinary. And I’m a new mom, so I would say for me and for other new parents out there, any kind of massage is excellent. It could be, for someone who needs to relax, maybe a thoughtful candle from Olives & Grace, plus a bottle of wine from Brix, and a massage.”

Brian Gullbrants, president of Encore Boston Harbor: “Every holiday season, my wife, Steph, and I give our friends and family home-baked cookies — from our family to yours. It’s a gift that takes effort, thought, and time ... and, of course, they taste amazing, too. There’s no better way to show that you genuinely care for someone than to bake something tasty around the holidays to share.”

Jack Hendler, co-owner of Jack’s Abby: “There are a lot of great beer books out there. I try to get a new one for my brothers every year since we all work together. Beer writer Joshua M. Bernstein just released a new one, “Drink Better Beer,” which I’m planning to gift them this year. It’s filled with great insights on the state of beer today. I just hope my brothers don’t see this quote.”

Linda Henry, managing director of The Boston Globe and Boston.com: “My favorite gift to give is happy memories from funny moments or special events, so I give a lot of photo gifts. An album from a trip, a framed group photo — if everyone is looking good, I’ll get a glass print — or a photo Christmas ornament for a very personal gift for my friends. I upload all of my photos to Shutterfly. They have an app to upload photos from my phone, too, and make custom gifts from there.”

Linda Holliday, director of The Bill Belichick Foundation: “For women, I’m always asked about my ‘bling’ jackets and hats. So I try to support several of these ladies and gift personal accessories, such as BROdenim and Custom Bling Inc., a local shop. As for men, I try to think of things that they can use to relax and unwind. Bose has come out with amazing noise-canceling headphones. And Concepts has collaborated with Canada Goose on some exceptional coats.

Matt Light, former Patriots offensive lineman: “Look, you can’t go wrong with wine. ... I love companies that also give back, so purposeful giving is really important. At the end of the day, we don’t need more stuff in this world, but if you’re giving things with a purpose and a meaning behind it, it goes a little bit further than just regular gifting.”

John Mandelman, vice president at the New England Aquarium and chief scientist at the Anderson Cabot Center for Ocean Life: “I focus my holiday gift-giving on sharing personal favorite items tied to hobbies I have, or items from companies doing great things in terms of either protecting the ocean or social justice. For example, I love providing friends some of my favorite local craft beers. I’ve also gotten my two daughters and other children in my family 4ocean bracelets. They use recycled materials for their bracelets and contribute proceeds from the sale to the cleanup of plastics and other debris in the ocean. I’ve also gifted products from companies with product lines or values linked to ocean conservation, including some unexpected ones like Tumi and Lush. In the non-ocean realm, I love gifting tickets to live music that a person might love. Definitely a big gag gift provider. My latest go-to are those Funko Pop! figurines that are associated with something personal about the person. And for my daughters, I definitely get them peanut M&M's so that I can in turn steal them all back to feed my never-ending addiction to that product."

Sue O'Connell, host and political commentator of NBC10

Boston/NECN: "I'm afraid I tend to be a good soldier and only give people gifts from their lists. Over the years, though, I have donated a farm animal in my family/friends' name to the Heifer organization."

Tom O'Keefe, founder of @BostonTweet: "Every year I buy my girlfriend a sweater or dress from Brass, a Boston-based, women-owned clothing brand that recently opened their first retail store on Charles Street. They are a great professional woman clothing brand. I would also be remiss if I didn't mention for the runner on your list a Stride for Stride running shirt, in which 100 percent of the proceeds support low-income runners."

Ana Sortun, chef-owner at Oleana, Sarma, and Sofra Bakery &

Café: "I always give cookbooks to one of my sisters, and this year the choice is 'Mastering Spice,' by my good friend Lior Lev Sercarz. I think spices are an extraordinary gift. ... [My] favorite spices from Burlap & Barrel are the urfa pepper and the sumac, and my favorite blends from La Boîte are shabazi, O.M.G., izak, and ana spice."

Maria Stephanos, NewsCenter 5 anchor:

"When I was a little girl, my mother was famous for her peanut butter bon bons. She would have my sister and I mix the insides, and we would stand on our tippy toes watching her dip them in the chocolate. Now, all these years later, I make these religiously every year with my kids (who aren't kids anymore). I know the recipe by heart but I love reading her recipe because it brings me back to the magic she created for us every day but especially at Christmas. And the best part is sharing them with my family, my friends, and people here at the station. It keeps her memory alive."

Astra Titus, owner of The Curious George Store: "We're a big book household. My sister is a really talented writer, and my mom is as well. So a lot of stuff revolving around writing books, or just books that we think are great ... Right now I don't have a particular book that I'm buying for someone, but if I were to buy a book as a Christmas present, I'm obsessed with Eckhart Tolle right now. So it would probably be some of his books."

Some responses have been lightly edited.

All items were independently selected and recommended.

Boston.com may earn an affiliate commission if you make a purchase after clicking on some links in this post.

TOPICS: Events Holiday Christmas Hanukkah Celebs People Guides

You May Like

Ads by Revcontent

Massachusetts Doctor "I Beg Americans To Throw Out This Vegetable Now"

Wellnessguide2020

How Dogs Cry for Help: 3 Warning Signs Your Dog is Crying for Help

Dr. Marty

Beauty Surgeon Says: "Do This If Your Eyebrows Are Disappearing"

Beverly Hills MD

1 Simple Trick to Save on Your Electric Bill (Try Tonight)

Money Saving Expert

Massachusetts Launches New Policy for Cars Used Less Than 50 Miles/day

Smarter Finances

MD: If You Have Dark Spots, Do This Immediately (It's Genius!)

Gundry MD

Want to leave a comment?

Create an Account

Or sign in to your account

Be civil. Be kind.

Read our full community guidelines.

LOVE LETTERS

Since COVID-19, 'he calls me every day, sometimes even twice'

May 19, 2020 | 9:00 AM

VIDEO

VIDEO: Partnership in a pandemic can be overwhelming. Here's what to do.

May 19, 2020 | 5:00 AM

OBITUARIES

Ken Osmond, Eddie Haskell on 'Leave It to Beaver,' dies

May 18, 2020 | 5:19 PM

BEACHES

Massachusetts beaches can reopen next week. Here are the rules you'll need to follow if you go.

May 18, 2020 | 2:48 PM

CORONAVIRUS

Still have questions about the state's reopening plan?
Share them with us.
May 18, 2020 | 2:23 PM

LIVE FROM FENWAY

Dropkick Murphys will perform a livestreaming concert at an empty Fenway Park — and Bruce Springsteen is joining them
May 18, 2020 | 10:15 AM

LOVE LETTERS

What did I do wrong?
May 18, 2020 | 8:58 AM

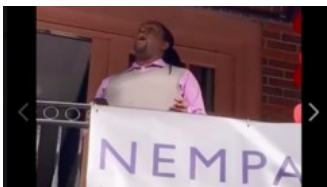

ENTERTAINMENT

John Krasinski and 'Some Good News' say goodbye
(for now)
May 17, 2020 | 9:57 PM

ART

Iconic rockers gathered in a Wayland backyard via a socially distant photo gallery
May 17, 2020 | 3:28 PM

NORTH END

Listen: NEMPAC Opera Project serenades the North End from Hanover Street balcony
May 17, 2020 | 10:06 AM

CELEBS

Phyllis George, female sportscasting pioneer, dies at 70
May 16, 2020 | 9:31 PM

FRED WILLARD

Fred Willard, the comedic improv-style actor, has died at 86
May 16, 2020 | 4:15 PM

AQUARIUM

Watch: Ruddy, a giant Pacific octopus, eat and give 'octopus hickies'

May 16, 2020 | 11:51 AM

SUMMER ACTIVITIES

This summer, consider camping in your own backyard

May 16, 2020 | 10:40 AM

'WINE FAIRIES'

'Wine fairies' are spreading random acts of kindness around the region

May 16, 2020 | 5:00 AM

BEER

How one beer-centric business is re-tooling during the shutdown

May 16, 2020 | 5:00 AM

WHAT TO WATCH

These movies and TV shows were filmed locally, and you can stream them right now

May 15, 2020 | 11:40 AM

CELEBS

Chris Evans and his brother are living together during the coronavirus pandemic

May 15, 2020 | 11:16 AM

LOVE LETTERS

Can't stop snooping during quarantine

May 15, 2020 | 8:59 AM

PHOTOS

Photos: Boston in the spring is beautiful. Here are 7 photos to prove it.

May 14, 2020 | 5:00 PM

LIFESTYLE

A local nurse on giving birth during the coronavirus pandemic

May 14, 2020 | 3:41 PM

MATT DAMON

Matt Damon reveals his daughter contracted coronavirus while he was stuck in Ireland

May 14, 2020 | 10:57 AM

LIFE DURING THE PANDEMIC

The Boston Book Festival is looking for essays about this challenging time

May 14, 2020 | 10:14 AM

LOVE LETTERS

I snooped and found out she watched pornography

May 14, 2020 | 8:45 AM

OBITUARIES

Beckett Cypher, 21-year-old son of Melissa Etheridge, dies

May 13, 2020 | 9:24 PM

CORONAVIRUS

Here are 9 tips from readers to make wearing a face covering more comfortable

May 13, 2020 | 3:30 PM

CORONAVIRUS

Two Pittsfield police officers recover from the coronavirus and share what it's like to donate plasma

May 13, 2020 | 10:08 AM

LOVE LETTERS

I reached out to an ex and now ...
May 13, 2020 | 9:47 AM

LOVE LETTERS

I reached out to an ex and now ...
May 13, 2020 | 9:00 AM

TV

How a local designer got Conan O'Brien to wear 2 of his
T-shirts on TV
May 12, 2020 | 12:08 PM

©2020 Boston Globe Media Partners, LLC

Advertise with Us | Do not sell my data | Privacy Policy | Terms of Service |
Member Agreement